

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Tamás Baranyi is Deputy Director for Strategy at the Hungarian Institute of International Affairs and Associate Professor at Pázmány Péter Catholic University. His research interests include the history of the United States, the history of the Cold War, foreign policy strategy and transatlantic relations.

Boglárka Borbély is a PhD student at the Doctoral School of Law and Political Sciences of Széchenyi István University (supervised by István Stumpf). She is Head of the Public Policy Analysis Department of the Cabinet Office of the Prime Minister and is a member of the Budapest Bar Association. Previously, she worked at the Secretariat of the Government Commissioner for Coordinating the Higher Education Model Change. Her research focuses on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Gábor Csizmazia is Research Fellow at the John Lukacs Institute for Strategy and Politics at Ludovika University of Public Service. His research focuses on American foreign policy and transatlantic relations, particularly the security relationship between the United States and East-Central Europe. He earned his PhD from the Doctoral School of Military Sciences at the Ludovika University of Public Service (2021), and was a visiting researcher at George Washington University (2018) and the Institute of World Politics (2024). He is Head of the Hungarian Marshall Center Alumni Association and is a lecturer in the Hungarian Diplomacy Academy program.

Tamás Fellegi is former Minister of National Development. His field of research is globalisation and the issues of Central and Eastern Europe, along with Hungarian–American relations. He was Director Emeritus of the Institute for American Studies at Ludovika University of Public Service and was Chairman of the Board at EuroAtlantic Consulting and Investment PLC.

Csaba Gondola was Chief Advisor to the Minister of Energy of Hungary and the Executive Director of the Institute for Energy Strategy, a Budapest-based think tank. Previously he worked as Deputy Head of Cabinet for the Minister of Justice. He obtained his JD in 2016 and is currently finishing his PhD on European Union law. During his studies he was a Congressional Fellow in the United States and a law student at the University of Vienna and the Catholic University of Leuven. His main focus is on energy policy, international law and energy law.

Klementina Kozma is an international security and defence policy analyst, economist and Research Fellow of the Center for Geopolitics at Mathias Corvinus Collegium. Her research focuses primarily on the presence of the United States and NATO in Southeastern Europe, with a particular emphasis on security policy issues concerning the Black Sea and Romania.

Csaba Krasznay is Associate Professor at Ludovika University of Public Service with cybersecurity and cyber warfare being his field of research. Besides his activities in higher education, he is present on the market as well. He obtained a CISA certification in 2005, CISM and CISSP in 2006, CEH in 2008, ISO 27001 Lead Auditor in 2012 and CSSLP in 2015. He is a board member of the Voluntary Cyberdefence Cooperation, member of ISACA Budapest Chapter, Magyary Zoltán E-government Association, Hungarian Association of Military Science, Scientific Association for Infocommunications and the Hungarian Association for Electronic Signature.

Tamás Magyarics is Professor Emeritus at Eötvös Loránd University, Budapest and Editor-in-Chief of the Hungarian Conservative and the Hungarian Review. He was, among others, Ambassador to Ireland and Head of the North American Department in the Hungarian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade. His major fields of interest incorporate the foreign affairs of the U.S. and the U.K. in the 20th century, as well as international relations.

Tibor Mándi is Associate Professor and Deputy Director of the Institute of Political Science, Faculty of Law and Political Science, Eötvös Loránd University. His research interests include the history of British and American political thought, its political philosophical and theoretical dimensions, and the relationship between British and American conservatism and liberalism.

Balázs Mártonffy is Senior Research Fellow and a founding Director of the John Lukacs Institute for Strategy and Politics at Ludovika University of Public Service. He received his doctorate in international relations from American University, School of International Service, where he was awarded the William C. Olson Award for excellence in teaching. He is also the recipient of the John McCain Dissertation Award by the Munich Security Conference, and has worked in various positions for the Hungarian foreign and defence ministries.

Tamás Matura is Associate Professor of the Department of International Relations at Corvinus University of Budapest and founding President of the Central and Eastern European Center for Asian Studies. After obtaining his first degree in law, he continued his education at Corvinus University to pursue an MA and finally a PhD in international relations. His research interests include China's foreign policy, EU–China and China – Central Europe relations.

László Örlös is Head of the Office of International Affairs at HEPA Hungarian Export Promotion Agency and external Expert of the John Lukacs Institute for Strategy and Politics at Ludovika University of Public Service. In addition to these functions, he is chair of the Sustainability Working Group of the Brussels-based Trade Promotion Europe. In his past positions, among others, he was chair of Hungary's Eximbank (2016–2019), the founding Managing Director of Hungary's Western Balkans Green Center (2019–2022). In addition, he held positions at multilateral development banks including being Senior Advisor to the Belgian and Austrian Executive Director at the World Bank Group in Washington, D.C. (2011–2016). He is the author of several articles and book chapters covering various topics in international finance and sustainability.

Lénárd Sándor is Head of the School of Law and of the Center for International Law at Mathias Corvinus Collegium, he is Associate Professor of Law and Head of the Barna Horváth Hungary Law and Liberty Circle that operates independently but in cooperation with the Federalist Society. Lénárd Sándor is a graduate of Pázmány Péter Catholic University (Budapest, Hungary), where he received his JD (summa cum laude) in law and political sciences as well as of Canisius University (New York, USA) where he received his MBA in international economics. He was a visiting scholar at the Aarhus University (Denmark), at the Osgoode Hall Law School in Toronto (Canada). He defended his PhD thesis with summa cum laude from the Doctoral School of Law and Political Sciences of Pázmány Péter Catholic University. He has published numerous articles on contemporary international legal and constitutional questions in various academic, intellectual and popular journals and magazines. He is the author of Constitutional Journey in the United States, published by MCC Press in 2022.

István Stumpf is Professor at Deák Ferenc Faculty of Law and Political Sciences at Széchenyi István University and was a Research Professor at the John Lukacs Institute for Strategy and Politics at Ludovika University of Public Service. He is a constitutional lawyer and political scientist, former Justice of the Constitutional Court, former Deputy Prime Minister and former Government Commissioner. Currently, he serves as a member of the Prime Minister's Strategic Advisory Council. He is a recipient of the Deák Ferenc Award and the Hungarian Order of Merit. His research interests include the separation of powers, the changing role of the state, constitutional adjudication and constitutional identity.